Nikola Röthemeyer & Annika Sailer

Schwarmfänger

17 February 2018 – 3 February 2019
(Ringgalerie)

Working over the year, in several stages, Nikola Röthemeyer and Annika Sailer, who are sisters, will transform the Ringgalerie into several narrative spaces. So-called “contact zones” emerge in this exhibition, where the public encounters mural-like representations and architectural forms which evoke flora, fauna and other elements as both playful abstraction and figurative ambivalence.

Nikola Röthemeyer (Braunschweig, 1972) completed her visual communication studies at Weißensee Academy of Art, Berlin in 2003 with a master’s degree. Since then she has been working as fine artist in Berlin. Annika Sailer (Bonn, 1975) completed her landscape architecture studies in 2003 with a diploma from the Technical University of Dresden. Since 2011 she lives and works in Munich as a landscape architect.
